20 Years Ago: Bulge Began

German General Saw No Victory

NEUBERG, Germany (AP) — The German general who was ordered to capture Bastogne 20 years ago said today that his mission succeeded, it still would not have won the Battle of the Bulge for Hitler.

On Dec. 16, 1944, Field Marshal Gerd von Rundstedt threw 250,000 of Germany's crack troops into a massive onslaught on thin U.S. defenses in the Ardennes Forest. The German objective was to cross the Meuse River and drive to Brussels and Antwerp.

Gen. Heinrich von Luettwitz, commanding the 5th German Armored Corps, was ordered to take Bastogne, a small Belgian frontier town at an important road junction. It had to be secured to safeguard the attackers' further advance, Luettwitz said.

"It was a desperate effort doomed from the outset," said Luettwitz, now 68. "The terrain was wholly unsuitable for any major attack. The Ardennes Mountains, rolling, forested country deeply cut by steep and twisting valleys of mountain streams, had few roads on which our armor could move.

"When we attacked, we strangled the Allied air operations. But any military leader of common sense should have known that the Allies' air superiority would finally win the battle.

"Under these circumstances, capturing Bastogne or not didn't make much difference in the over-all picture.

"After easily overrunning the American defenses, my troops advanced quickly toward Bastogne, which we were to reach on the evening of the 18th.

"That evening intelligence reported to me that they had intercepted American radio signals ordering the 101st U.S. Airborne Division from Reims into Bastogne. It became a race between us and the Americans of who would be in Bastogne first."

A panzer commander, Lt. Gen. Fritz Bayerlein, telephoned Luettwitz around 11 p.m. that he was only 5 kilometers — 3 miles — northeast of Bastogne.

Bayerlein had sent a reconnaissance party toward the American lines. It reported everything clear, and Bayerlein decided to advance on the reconnoitered path, a country lane, rather than the main concrete road.

"From what Bayerlein told me, he could have taken Bastogne at that hour practically without a shot," Luettwitz said.

"But instead, after advancing a few hundred feet, ... heavy tanks sank axle deep into mud

New Guiana Cabinet Set

British Provide For Jagan Ouster

GEORGETOWN, British Guiana (AP) — Forbes Burnham today began lining up a new government for British Guiana after Britain swiftly changed the colony's constitution to permit the ouster of Marxist Premier Cheddi Jagan.

Burnham said he expected to get his government fully in action by the end of the week.

The new premier's People's National Congress party won slightly more than 40 per cent of the vote in the Dec. 7 election, so Burnham must put together a coalition. He has been promised the support of Peter D'Aguilar's ultra-conservative United Force, which won 7 seats in the National Assembly. With those seats and his own party's 22, Burnham will have a majority of 5 over Jagan's People's Progressive party.

Although Jagan's party polled the biggest vote, a new system of proportional representation denied him a majority in the assembly. Jagan bucked tradition, however, by refusing to resign.

A constitutional order forcing Jagan out was initiated in London Monday by Colonial Secretary Anthony Greenwood. After approval by the Privy Council, the order was signed by Queen Elizabeth II as British Guiana's chief of state, and Burnham was sworn in.

The order provides "that if any time before the House of Assembly meets the governor informs the premier that he is about to reappoint him or to appoint another person as premier, then the premier, and all other ministers and parliamentary secretaries, are forthwith to vacate their offices."

Jagan has accused the opposition of fraudulent tactics in the election.

Polar Air Mass Drops Mercury

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A frigid mass of polar air dropped temperatures well below zero in the Plains and Great Lakes regions today, while more snow clogged the Northwest.

Moving slowly eastward across the Great Lakes, the icy front dumped several inches of snow on the western sections of Michigan and New York.

In the northwest, new snow made highways treacherous. Communities in Minnesota and North Dakota reported temperatures as low as -20, as another gigantic polar front over northwestern Canada moved slowly southward.

Bemidji, Minn., reported a high of -1 Monday.

Yankee General Replied: 'Nuts!'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Even after 20 years, the words on the yellowed sheet of paper made the old soldier mad.

"It was the last sentence, that lousy last sentence that did it," growled Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe today as he reread the German surrender ultimatum delivered to him in surrounded Bastogne.

The German commander gave McAuliffe two hours to surrender his 101st Airborne Division and the Belgian town it held. After that, the German warned, massed Nazi artillery would "annihilate the U.S.A. troops in and near Bastogne."

Then came the German wind-up sentence — the one that stung McAuliffe because he felt it held a sneer.

It said: "All the serious civilian losses caused by this artillery fire would not correspond with the well-known American humanity."

On impulse, the hard-jawed commander of the "Battered Bastards of Bastogne" replied with one defiant word — "Nuts."

That reply made McAuliffe a living legend of World War II. Now 66 and retired from the Army and a big chemical company, the veteran paratrooper general talked about the epic siege as he sat in his comfortable apartment, high above a busy Washington avenue.

Though his hair and bristling eyebrows are iron gray, he still wears a chesty air of command. The Battle of the Bulge, of which the Bastogne siege was a pivotal episode, started at dawn 20 years ago Wednesday.

That was when the badly wounded German army, after retreating grudgingly since the Normandy invasion the previous June, launched its last-spasm offensive through the snow-cloaked Ardennes Forest. On Hitler's orders, Nazi panzers and infantry drove at the American line in a bid to split the Allied front and reach Antwerp.

Before long McAuliffe found himself defending Bastogne, a small cobbled village, with 14,000 men — an assortment of paratroopers, tankers, artillery men.

"Bastogne was the hub of a very important road net," McAuliffe said. "If we denied that town to the Germans, it would pretty well destroy their offensive."

This he was determined to do. By Dec. 18, the German ring had closed around Bastogne. The American riflemen, machine gunners and bazooka men

Army Reserve Windup Slated

16 Months Given Before Collapse

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Pentagon is aiming to complete the revolutionary reorganization of the Army's Reserve forces in about 16 months, it was learned today.

Key officers of the National Guard and the Army Reserve have been told in secret briefings that the objective date for final action is the end of March 1966.

It is expected that Guard and Reserve outfits will go to summer training next year in their present form, some of these officers told The Associated Press.

The Army staff, aided by Guard and Reserve officials, already has begun the difficult job of working out solutions for the problems involved in shifting 150,000 Army Reservists and their units to the National Guard.

One of the first jobs to be handled is the drafting of a "troop list." This involves surveying the 4,000 Reserve units to decide which 2,000 or so will fit into the expanded Guard organizations, and how they will be distributed among the states.

Such a troop list — which is really only a beginning point for the reorganization — is not expected to be ready before mid-February. At that time, the states will know what units they will lose and what units they will gain.

Plans are being made to brief state governors, who have a powerful say under the law as to the disposition of the National Guard within their states.

Questions poured in on the Pentagon from reservists unsure of where they stand. Many of these questions cannot be answered now, on the basis of the skeleton plan outlined by Secretary of Defense Robert S. McNamara last Saturday. Many will have to wait months for clarification.

7 from Fairfield School for Boys Flee Institution

LANCASTER, Ohio (AP) — The holiday season has brought a rash of escapes from the newly-named, but old and overcrowded Fairfield School for Boys.

Seven fled the correctional institution near here and are still at large. Five escaped early in the morning and two more made it in early evening.

The terms they were serving at the institution, formerly called Boys Industrial School, ranged from auto theft and intoxication to assault.

The Ohio Highway Patrol identified the boys and the counties from which they were sentenced as: Thomas Sempers, 17, Wayne; Martin Walters, 16; Ross, Lester N. Davis, 16, Columbiana; Allen K. Drayton, 16, Lucas; Roland Buncy, 17, Cuyahoga; Gregory A. Moore, 15, Cuyahoga, and Andrew W. Heard, 14, Cuyahoga.

Glenn Miller War Fate Still Mystery

LONDON (AP) — Twenty years ago today Glenn Miller took off in a single-engine plane for France — and vanished.

The disappearance of the gifted American bandleader and trombonist remains as deep a mystery now as it was on Dec. 15, 1944.

One of the last persons to see Miller was Jack Hylton, the British impresario and former bandleader.

Miller, then 33, headed for Paris with a pilot to arrange a broadcast for his 68-piece band. The single-engine Norseman took off from an airport near London in a slight fog.

Miller's disappearance fostered rumors which still circulate.

These ranged from the belief that the Germans shot down his plane to the theory that he crashed in France and, an amnesia victim, died later, unrecognized.

"I certainly don't know what happened to him," says Hylton, "but on that night he did keep saying that he wanted to get near the fighting and that he was going to do his damndest to get a peek at it. But who really knows?"

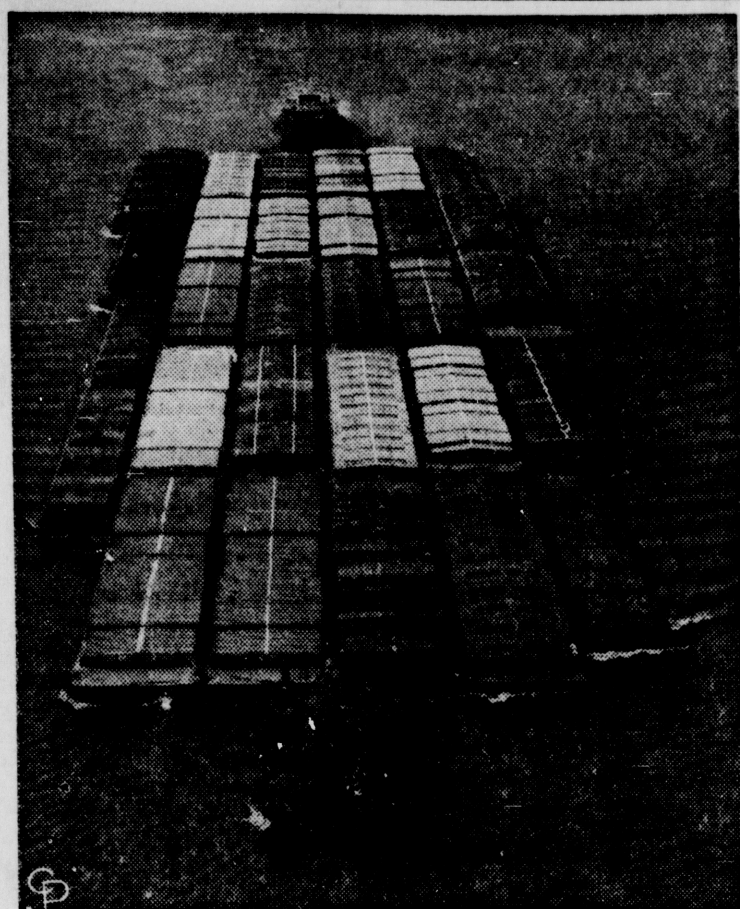

Gemini Launching Set for Jan. 5

CAPE KENNEDY, Fla. (AP) — Space agency officials will try again Jan. 5 to launch an unmanned Project Gemini capsule into suborbital test flight.

The final unmanned flight of the project was scrubbed last week when a defect developed in the rocket engines.

The fully instrumented capsule will be fired over a suborbital course which will generate searing heat to test both the spacecraft and a Titan 2 booster for manned flight.

Astronauts Virgil I. Grissom and John Young will ride the Gemini capsule into earth orbit, perhaps in April.

LOOK, MA, NO DECKHANDS — The craft in front is rudderless and crewless, but steers the barges down the Mississippi directed by radio from the tug at rear. The bow steering boat, called Pathfinder by Cargo Carries, Inc., has a 1,000-hp. diesel engine and a 72-inch directional propeller built into a well on its aft end. The prop can rotate 360 degrees. The new steering cuts enough time off going around bends to save more than a day on the St. Louis-New Orleans round trip. The radio steering control is pushbutton.

Negroes 'Wait-and-See' On New Court Rights Rule

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Negro leaders, while jubilant over the Supreme Court's ruling upholding the controversial public accommodations section of the Civil Rights Act, were taking a wait-and-see attitude today over whether full compliance with the ruling would follow.

President Johnson, noting there already has been "encouraging widespread compliance with the act in the five months it has been law," expressed hope the court rulings Monday would result in increased acceptance. Other leaders, Negro and white, called for compliance.

Segregationist restaurant owner Lester Maddox of Atlanta awaited a decision by the court on his own appeal to a lower court order that he admit Negroes. Maddox said he felt a similar ruling would not be made in his case because he does not engage in interstate commerce.

John Lewis, chairman of the Student Non-Violent Coordinating Committee which has been instrumental in many sit-ins throughout the South, hailed the court's ruling on the Civil Rights Act and sit-in demonstrators as a landmark.

"The decision vindicated the thousands of demonstrators who made the civil rights bill not only possible but imperative," Lewis said. "It must be held as the landmark in the struggle for complete social, economic and political equality for all Americans."

Lewis said his organization had no plans for further action at the moment but would wait to see developments.

Truman Reveals He Had Hint FDR Was Dying Man

NEW YORK (AP) — Former President Harry S. Truman says he had indications 13 days before President Franklin D. Roosevelt died that Roosevelt's life was near an end.

In a transcribed television series to be broadcast next Friday, Truman said:

"It became perfectly obvious to me that due to (his) health I would eventually inherit the presidency. I had seen him just 13 days before. His eyes were sunken, his magnificent smile was missing from his care-worn face. He seemed a spent man."

"I realized I would probably have to take over an impossible job, and I had a strange feeling that Mr. Roosevelt knew."

Roosevelt died April 12, 1945. Truman, then vice president, was sworn in that day.

Portrait of Weygandt Is Given to Tribunal

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A 50 x 42 inch oil portrait of Carl V. Weygandt, who died Sept. 4 at 75 after serving as Ohio's chief justice for 30 years — longer than any other man — will be presented to the Supreme Court here Wednesday by Mrs. Jessie Weygandt, his widow. The portrait was painted in 1957 by Rolf Stoll, formerly of Western Reserve University faculty, and has been hanging in the Weygandt home in Lakewood.

State Educators Ask Fat Boost In Next Budget

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The State Board of Education plans to ask the Legislature for an additional $174 million next January but the state's budget chief Finance Director Richard L. Krabach says "I don't know what they are talking about, really."

The board made its surprise move Monday with an 11-point proposal for the Legislature for the 1965-67 period.

Board member Ray W. Kimmey of Dayton said the increase would provide the state's public schools with a "minimum dollar program."

"There is much more that should be done to improve educational opportunities in Ohio," Kimmey said.

The board proposed to raise to an estimated $696.9 million the cost of the School Foundation program, that formula by which the state distributes funds to local school districts. Some of the money, a minor portion, would go for teacher pay increases.

The present biennium foundation program will cost about $522.6 million.

The board said $37 million of the proposed $174 million would be for increased enrollment. The rest is for expanded or new programs.

Krabach said the normal increase in past years has been about $50 million but should be less in the future because "the baby boom is over."

He said the board had not submitted its program to his office but that the Ohio Education Department had offered its 1965-67 program two weeks ago.

"The proper question is where is this money coming from?" Krabach said he would have to see the detailed board proposal before further comment. He added, however, that the board "only has the responsibility to spend money."

The board said most of the ad-

Their Teacher Tattles On Bess, Harry Truman

INDEPENDENCE, Mo. (AP) — Harry Truman and Bess Wallace were good students — but ah, that Charlie Ross!

Charlie, says Mrs. W.L.C. Palmer, was brilliant — the best student she ever had in her Latin and mathematics classes at Independence High School. He became a famous newspaperman and press secretary to the president of the United States, his school chum, Ross died in 1950.

But what about Harry?

"I knew Harry would amount to something," said Mrs. Palmer. "I knew he'd make his mark, but I never thought he'd be president and Bess the first lady."

Mrs. Palmer, a petite and sprightly great-grandmother who looks like everybody's favorite teacher, is 89 — just 9 years older than the former President and Mrs. Truman.

Truman introduced her from the platform Sunday when he participated in the dedication of the Truman High School in Independence. Monday, sitting in the living room of her Victorian-style home, she talked of those days when Harry and Bess — and Charlie Ross — were in her classes.

"Bess was a popular girl. She always had lots of beaux, but she knew who to choose."

"Harry says they were sweethearts from the time he met her at the Presbyterian church and that they were sweethearts in high school. But I didn't know it then. I guess he never kept company with any other girl."

"Harry was always reading and always was trying to keep up with Charlie — and he did a good job of it. Bess was an excellent student too."

Mrs. Palmer taught at Independence High for four years, then had to retire because she married Palmer, the superintendent of schools. He died in 1937.

'Brow Prints' Studied To Determine Man's Ills

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP)—The furrowed brow is just like a fingerprint, an optometrist reported today and it often means headaches, nervousness and a sore neck.

A "brow print," said Dr. Akira Tajiri of Reedley, Calif., can expose illness to the optometrist as readily as a fingerprint establishes identity to an FBI agent.

He explained the new technique of brow-printing at a scientific session of the American Academy of Optometry.

Dr. Tajiri said he dusts the forehead of suspected sufferers with a fluorescent powder and then reads the brow under an ultraviolet light.

He said this method has been virtually 100 per cent effective in uncovering hyperphoria, a misalignment of the visual axis of the eyes.

The disorder can cause imbalance, dizziness, headaches, head tilt, neck and shoulder soreness, fatigue and nervousness. It also reduces the ability to judge distances, especially at night, and slows down reading.

Dr. Tajiri said he asked patients to wrinkle their brow, then he dusts the brow and tells them to relax.

Since hyperphoria sufferers subconsciously compensate for the eye disorder, he said, "the ultra violet light immediately reveals the suspicious furrow."

Permanent frown lines, he added, are caused by stress of subconscious efforts to compensate for the disorder. Permanent frown lines are especially difficult to discover in persons, like children, with a smooth forehead.

The conventional prism test for hyperphoria often fails to disclose it, he said.

The state award is a $200 bond. Nationally the first place contestant will receive a $1,000 bond, second place a $500 bond and third a $300 bond.

County winners last year were Arnold Gabriel of Logan Elm and Patricia Collins of Teays Valley.

Local Politicians Reminded of Deadline

The Pickaway County Board of Elections today reminded local politicians that 4 p. m. Friday is the deadline for filing statements of expenses incurred for the November general election.

A board spokesman said candidates must file a list of all money spent during their campaigns. The penalty for failing to do so is a five - year suspension from seeking a political office.

Election laws forbid the appearance of candidates names on a ballot for the five-year period if the expense statements are not filed by the deadline.

SANTA and the SINGING TURTLE

Synopsis: Womp imprisons the Prince in a magic circle drawn in the snow. Then he puts on the magic shoes and leaves for Fairyland to cast a spell over Santa Claus.

CHAPTER TEN Santa in Fairyland

At dawn the turtle and the Snowman arrived in Fairyland. While they waited for the Prince to arrive they removed their magic shoes, for Tweedledees had told them the shoes were good only for a one-way trip to Fairyland. They threw the shoes away and gazed around them, speechless.

"I shall melt!" thought the Snowman worriedly.

But he didn't because Fairyland is a place where the weather is neither hot nor cold but always just right for every creature who comes there.

Fairies and elves and pixies romped among the flowers. Storybook characters sat under the trees and told tales, old and new. Strange insects gossiped together and animals who had always feared each other were friends today in Fairyland.

All around were the sights and sounds of the Christmas Music Festival that was about to begin. Instruments were being tuned and voices tried out. Some musicians rushed about nervously pulling their hair. Others stood muttering to themselves. Still others stamped their feet in time to tunes beating in their heads.

George began to shake with excitement. So many musicians! Could he possibly perform as well as they? He was sure he could. He longed to throw back his head this very minute and show how beautifully he could sing, how golden the tone of his voice.

But where was the Prince? George turned his head this way and that, searching. What could have happened to him? A sudden trickle of fear caused him to shiver.

"Look yonder!" whispered the Snowman suddenly. "He's coming!"

With a sigh of relief, George turned. But instead of the Prince here was Santa Claus coming down the path. He was short and fat and dressed all in red. He was jolly and smiling and as happy as if the Music Festival were something he had been looking forward to for a hundred years, yes indeed he had!

He came straight up to George and the Snowman and said, "Welcome! Have you come to the Festival to perform?"

The Snowman said shyly, "I've come to listen. George has come to sing."

"Ah, said Santa nodding at the turtle. "I've heard of you! I love a good voice and I am looking forward to your performance. In fact, just to start things off right I shall put you down to sing first." He took out a notebook and began to write down George's name.

But George said, "Please, if you don't mind, I'd like to wait for my friend, Prince Chad."

Then he told Santa how the

The testing was supervised by Ohio State University.

Santa had heard of the turtle's voice.

Stock Traders Looking for Yearend Rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Down in Wall Street they're beginning to look a bit wistfully for that yearend rally in stocks that sentimentalists like to consider as traditional as Santa's sleigh.

Some see the present market as chiefly reflecting the usual December problems. There is considerable selling of issues that have had a bad year to take losses for 1964 income tax purposes.

There also has been some pressure on prices of the sturdier issues from selling to take profits now when it's possible to offset them on income tax returns by losses incurred during the year.

But some brokers, although admitting the technical nature of much of this month's trading, think many of their customers are worried by a string of disturbing news items of late, and by a larger than usual parcel of yearend uncertainties at home and abroad.

And there also is human nature that makes stock traders nervous because the averages have fallen so far from the November highs.

The Dow-Jones average of 30 industrial stocks slipped from its record 891.71 of Nov. 18 to 864.43 December 1. It rallied a bit but slipped again and Dec. 11 closed at 864.34.

Profit taking and tax loss selling couldn't account for all of that drop. The uncertainties range from the increasing troubles in Viet Nam to the new regime in Communist Russia, from the course President De Gaulle of France may take to Britain's latest financial crisis as a new Labor Government takes power.

At home there has been a slowdown in parts of the economy, charged in large part to auto strikes. But there also have been doubts about the course of the U.S. economy in 1965 with most predictions calling for a slower rate of growth. Industry is expected to expand, but not quite as fast. Profits are supposed to rise, but more modestly.

But the bulls are stressing that the administration and Congress may not sit idly by if a slowdown occurs. Another nudge to the economy might come from further tax cuts, or from more government spending for civilian projects.

get his help for the people in his kingdom. He told how Patrick Tweedledees had given them the magic shoes to get to Fairyland and how all the Prince had to do was put them on and he would be there.

"I'm so afraid something bad has happened," he ended anxiously.

"Nonsense," said Santa cheerfully. "We'll put you down for number 15. By that time the Prince will be here and you can sing your best."

He wrote George's name down opposite number 15 and then he called all the musicians together and said, "Let's begin!"

He led the way to the Fairy Queen's garden where the Queen was waiting on her throne. Santa sat beside her in a red-cushioned rocking chair. All the elves and pixies and animals and storybook folk settled on the grass around them.

As the festivities were about to begin there was a small commotion at the back of the garden. A late comer had arrived.

George looked eagerly over his shoulder, sure the Prince had come at last. But it wasn't the Prince. It was Womp, cloaked in black and carrying a flute in his hands.

Tomorrow: The Festival.

Jurors Say Camera Is No Distraction

TYLER, Tex. (AP) — The 12 jurors in the 1962 trial of Billie Sol Estes say they were not distracted by television cameras in the courtroom, the Tyler Courier-Times-Telegraph has reported.

The newspaper polled the jurors, 11 men and one woman, after the U.S. Supreme Court announced it would hear an appeal of the Tyler trial based on Estes' rights were violated due to television coverage.

The jury convicted Estes on Nov. 7, 1962, of embezzlement in connection with his mortgages on fertilizer tanks. His punishment was set at eight years in prison, but he remains free on bond pending outcome of the appeals.

French View on U.N. Dues Labeled Tough

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) — The emphasis has been mainly on the Russians in behind-the-scenes negotiations seeking to resolve the U.N. financial crisis.

The Soviet Union and six Communist-bloc nations are more than two years in arrears on peace-keeping assessments. France also becomes two years in arrears Jan. 1.

In the view of many U.N. diplomats, the French position on refusing to pay for peace-keeping operations is tougher than the Soviet Union's.

The Soviet Union has expressed willingness to make voluntary contributions into a U.N. "rescue" fund and thus avoid a challenge to voting rights in the General Assembly under Article 19 of the U.N. Charter. It has not spelled out how much or when it will pay.

There has been no expression of that kind from France, which has remained mostly outside the negotiations now taking place.

The United States insists that Article 19 must be applied the first time a vote is taken in the assembly. Under a no-vote truce worked out with Secretary-General U Thant, the assembly is listening to the annual policy debate after electing a president by acclamation.

Asian-Africans have advanced a plan under which Article 19 would be suspended for the duration of the session, a rescue fund established to keep the organization from going bankrupt, and a review board set up to draft a formula for starting and financing future U.N. peace keeping.

France owes slightly more than $16 million in assessments for Congo peace-keeping. It could pay $1.5 million and get out of the two-years-in-arrears classification.

The Soviet Union owes $52.6 million for peace keeping in the Congo and the Middle East, and after Jan. 1 will have to pay around $15 million to avoid a challenge to its assembly voting rights.

U.N. officials say about 20 countries will be more than two years in arrears if they make no payment before Jan. 1. They decline to list them.

France has paid its assessments for the U.N. Emergency Force created after the Suez crisis of 1956. The French say they have contributed voluntarily ly because they see merit in maintaining the force, although they abstained in the assembly decision of Nov. 5, 1956, authorizing the force.

France also was among abstainers when the Security Council decided July 14, 1960, to authorize the secretary-general to put together the U.N. Congo force. The other abstainers, Britain and Nationalist China, have made payments.

The basic French position has not changed since Ambassador Roger Seydoux outlined it last October before a meeting of a 21-nation group studying the situation.

He made these points: —France does not accept the advisory opinion of the World Court, later upheld by a General Assembly vote, that peace-keeping assessments are legally binding on members, the same as assessments for the regular U.N. budget.

—Only the Security Council has authority to prescribe methods of financing and apportioning expenses for peace-keeping operations it authorizes.

—Recommendations by the General Assembly can be binding only on states which accept them. It is for those states to find methods of resolving the financial problem arising from those recommendations.

Liz Taylor's Film 'Son' Plans To Retire at Age 9

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Morgan Mason, after four months of acting the role of Elizabeth Taylor's son, is prepared to announce his retirement. He is nine.

This is one of the tidbits related by Morgan's mother, Pamela Mason, just returned from the Paris filming of "Flight of the Sandpiper." She had been suffering from laryngitis, a dread disease for one of the town's most avid talkers. She had recovered enough to deliver a few tart comments on the film and its participants.

Of her son's career, she reported: "He's back in school here and I never thought it would happen, but he's glad of it. I think he's had his fill of acting."

"It was a long, long picture: seven weeks in Monterey, two weeks here and nine weeks in Paris. I don't think he would have minded so much if he had been working all the time. But he would be called only two days a week.

"There were countless delays.

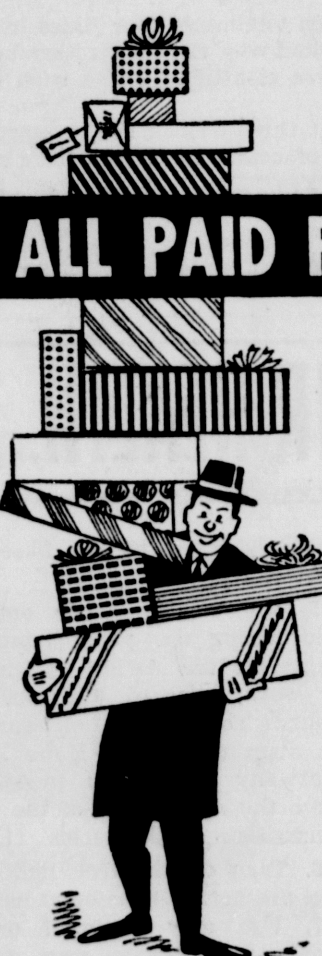

At first they were working six days a week in Paris, but Elizabeth both put a stop to that. And all of her bathing suit scenes in Monterey were re-shot because she finally lost 15 pounds."

Mrs. Mason said she only visited the set twice during the entire filming. Her absences were purposeful. For one thing, she didn't want Morgan to feel any conflict of authority between the director and herself.

"And also, people on the picture are terrified of me because I talk," she added.

She is just as happy that Morgan is now more interested in an aviation career, rather than acting. His father, James Mason, also hopes the boy doesn't grow up to be an actor.

Said Mrs. Mason: "Acting is not a satisfactory line of work for men. Most males like to be men of action. But an actor's most significant action is the result of control by other men — writers, directors and producers. So they can't really have much satisfaction in their profession."

Capitalism—Soviet Style

Ever since the overthrow of Khrushchev, western speculation has continued on the changes which are to come both in the Soviet Union's foreign affairs and in its domestic policies. The changes are inevitable is taken for granted. It is no longer a secret that the marked by serious economic failures and internal splits within the international communist organization.

No new trend can yet be determined in Russia's external affairs. Although the post-Khrushchev rulers have made attempts to reconcile their differences with the Chinese Reds, the steps toward amending of the breach have been more visionary than real. The current lull may be no more than a temporary respite to give the new leaders opportunity to serve their position.

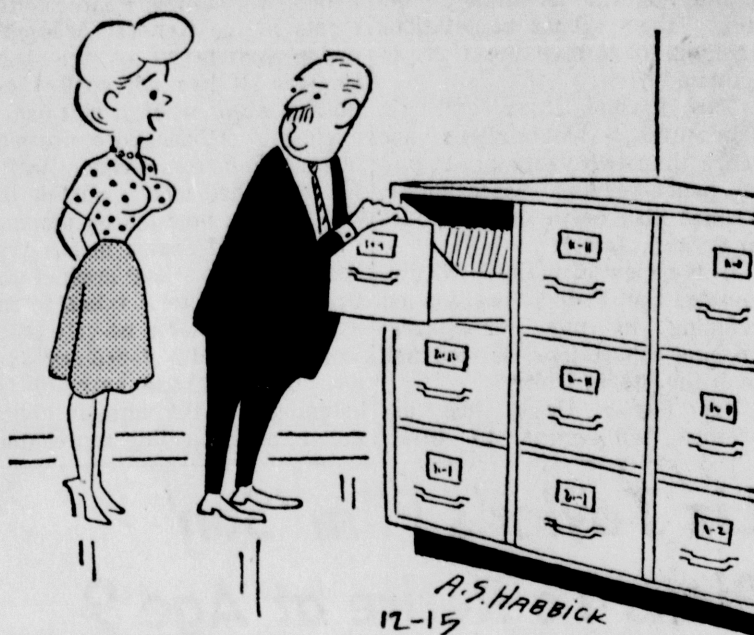

But in domestic economic affairs, the new hierarchy seems to be making fundamental changes, and rapidly. The West has only been able to guess at the seriousness of Russia's economic tag-nation, which was first spotlighted with the grain crisis of 1963, but the rapidity of change coming to the Soviet Union indicates the need for immediate economic improvement.

Soviet economic paper are filled with suggestions for market research, tests of supply and demand, interest recovered on investment studies, and a general measurements of efficiency, although introduction of cost accounting practices in industry. Profits — anathema to Marxist doctrinaires — are now accepted measurements of efficiency, although they are largely theoretical since they accrue to the state.

It is no simple matter for an economic system so heavily laden with bureaucratic planning as the Soviet system has a system where consumer market forces are permitted a freer reign. But the necessity for frantic action to put new life in a halting economy was underlined when Premier Koygin offered to begin repayment of long-standing lendlease debts to the United States in return for large doses of new credit.

None of the payments on the 20-year-old debt have been made, and if made would undoubtedly have to be preceded by new credit of many times the amount of the payments. This is not accepted capitalist practice, but one cannot expect Moscow to go all out for capitalism all at once.

Speaking of YOUR HEALTH...

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

The stockings were hung by the chimney with care, in hopes that the doctor wouldn't be there.

This comforting Happy Christmas wish, adapted from Clement Clarke Moore's famous poem, can be a reality if simple safety precautions are observed by every family this Christmas.

Although Fire Departments and community groups each year issue warnings about the potential fire hazard of Christmas trees, the unhappy record of tragic fires as the result of improper handling of Christmas trees continues to be a serious threat to safety and life.

The head of every family should be aware of the specific rules that must be adhered to if the Christmas tree is to be a thing of beauty, not tragedy.

Following are some suggestions that can help you protect your family from the danger of a Christmas tree fire:

1. Small trees are generally less hazardous than large ones.
2. Wait until just before Christmas to set up your tree. If you buy early, keep the tree outdoors until ready to set up, that it will not dry out.
3. Set the tree in water, in a cool part of the room and away from the fireplace or radiator.
4. Be sure that the tree is securely fixed to the base so that it will not topple.

5. Check all electric outlets and wiring on your string of lights. If the wiring is frayed or worn, discard the set of lights. This precaution cannot be overemphasized. Make sure that any lights you purchase have the safety seal of the Underwriters Laboratories (UL).
6. Turn off the tree lights if you are not going to be at home.
7. Use only fireproof ornaments to decorate your tree, preferably made of metal or glass. If decorations are made of fabric or paper, make sure that they are flameproof.
8. If needles near lights seem to be turning brown, rearrange the lights.
9. Remember that dried trees are inflammable. If you notice that needles are beginning to fall, you should dispose of the tree at once.
10. When the gifts are unwrapped, gather up scattered paper and decorations and discard them properly and quickly.

Make this a safe and happy Christmas for you and your family. Take these sensible precautions to avoid the possibility of fire. When you select gifts for your children, avoid the dangerous "weapons" — toys that may injure them, especially if carelessly handled in

Insult for Insult

By John Chamberlain

In spite of the fact that Stalin sent him to mine gold in the northeast corner of Siberia under not very pleasant circumstances, Vladimir Petrov, a Yale University lecturer in Russia, bears the world no grudges.

So, when Alexander Chakovsky the editor of a Moscow literary gazette who has been in this country on a "cultural exchange," called Professor Petrov a "traitor" for having had the temerity to escape from Stalin's clutches after six years in a prison camp, it evoked nothing more from the alleged miscreant than a smile. Petrov thinks his sin consisted merely of being prematurely against Stalin's "cult of personality."

But if Vladimir Petrov is understandably mellow (he is now the happy father of six American children), it is still reasonable to ask just why it is considered "cultural exchange" to invite Soviet hard liners to this country to insult American citizens. To be called a "traitor" is libelous, yet we permit the visiting editor of the Soviet "Literaturnaya Gazeta" to get away with using a term that no American could use without risking a fine of a hundred thousand dollars.

Charles A. Moser, a teacher of Slavic languages who is a colleague of Professor Petrov's, is less forgiving than his insulted friend. He points out that Mr. Chakovsky calls the New York Times a "militant organ of American reaction." Robert Rozhdenskiy, another Soviet literary man who has recently been bringing "cultural exchange" to America, seems to be as unimpeachable as Chakovsky himself. According to Professor Moser, Rozhdenskiy likes to refer to American interrogators as "pike and carp." When he was busy exchanging culture with Californians, Rozhdenskiy visited Disneyland. He promptly identified himself poetically with a group of American Indians, imagining that he was joining them in a war dance. His poem reads, in rough translation: "We've stopped — we look — astounded."

Oh what silken skin you have! Oh what hair you wives have! And what if we took a knife to that silken skin? What if, what if — amidst the silence — We should once more hear the warpath's call — How the tomahawk would glint above the dew then! What scalps would steam in our hands!

If this is "cultural exchange," it would seem that Americans are not getting their fair share of it. Putting the shoe on the other foot, can you imagine an American hard line anti-Communist — say like Bill Buckley, the editor of National Review — being invited to visit Moscow in even-up cultural exchange for Alexander Chakovsky?

Just think of the uproar in Pravda if an American literary man were to visit the Russian grave of John Reed, an American who preferred Communism to capitalism and call him a "traitor"?

For that matter, what if an American poet, visiting one of those Asiatic provinces that the Czar's soldiers had wrested from the Chinese or the Mongols, were to write a poem suggesting that the descendants of Kubla Khan or Tamerlane might look upon the "silken skin" of their Russian conquerors and think of taking a knife to it?

You get the idea. Personally, this columnist doesn't mind having an Alexander Chakovsky or a Robert Rozhdenskiy visit us. But he would insist on the Russians living up to their part in an even-up cultural exchange bargain. Our State Department should forthwith demand that some good American conservative authors be granted visas to tour Russia. Jörn Dos Passos should be given carte blanche to visit Samarkand and write prose poems about Asiatics who might wish to stage the Oriental equivalent of an American Indian scalping party. And Bill Buckley or his sub-editor on National Review, Jim Burnham, should be invited to tour the Soviet universities, with permission to apply the description of "traitor" to various Americans who have openly transferred their allegiance to the Soviet Union. We can think of a few, but, unlike Alexander Chakovsky, we have to beware of the libel laws.

This column's only political program is to let goose and gander have the same sauce. Insult for insult, and barbaric poem for barbaric poem, we demand reciprocity. Friendship, of course, would be better, but how get it out of an Alexander Chakovsky, who thinks the John Birch Society has taken over the New York Times?

Battles Won in Men's Hearts

By Hal Boyle

NEW YORK (AP) — Twenty years ago he called the Western world with fear, but now he is a gray little old man who likes to weed his garden in peace.

He is retired Gen. Hasso E. von Manteuffel, seven times wounded in battle, one of Germany's most decorated soldiers, and leader of its celebrated 5th Panzer army in the Battle of the Bulge.

Just two decades ago Wednesday his troops infiltrated the front lines of American troops resting in the Ardennes Forest. They came like ghosts across the snow in the foggy dawn, starting what some have called the greatest single battle in American history.

Von Manteuffel, now 67, discussed the conflict on a recent visit here to act as advisor on a film of the battle, which is being made with the cooperation of the U.S. Defense Department.

He is proudest of the skill by which his men, through camouflaged movements, achieved complete tactical surprise. "I wanted to sneak by the outposts like cats," he recalled, "and this went off well. It was the biggest German success of the operation.

"But your men were not to blame for this. They were supposed to be in a rest area and they were thinly strung out."

Like other German commanders, Von Manteuffel thought Adolf Hitler's goal was grandiose and hopeless: it was no less than to wrap up the Allied armies in the west, thus leaving Hitler free to deal with the Russians in the east.

"The biggest mistake that Hitler made at this time," he commented acidly was to think that the General Army could do what it had done in 1940.

"After all, we were in the 6th year of war. He did not have enough material and the soldiers of 1944 were not the same as those of 1939."

The rampaging Germans did streak 60 miles through U.S. lines at one point to get within four miles of the Meuse River. But they were held up for price-less days at one vital road center, St. Vith, and never did break through U.S. defenses at a second key town, Bastogne.

By Christmas Eve, von Manteuffel said, he realized the Nazi drive had been beaten.

"Once the fog lifted and the American Air Force could go into action and isolate the battlefield, I knew we could no longer sustain our offensive."

"The outstanding bravery of the elements of the U. S. Army employed in the battles of St. Vith and Bastogne is highly recognized by me, a former enemy. They initiated the final defeat of the German forces on the Western Front."

"The morale factors are decisive. Decisive battles are won in the hearts of men. Bastogne and St. Vith are fundamental examples of this."

Captured by British troops at the close of the war, Von Manteuffel later worked as export manager for a German manufacturing firm until his retirement a few years ago.

The former general, who stands only 5 feet 4, weighs 123 pounds and has a gnome-like sense of humor, is a chain smoker.

"I built everything on human trust," he remarked. "Under me a general got no more rations than a soldier. I never believed in asking more of my soldiers than I could do. I ate and drank exactly as they did, and they trusted me."

"I live a healthy life now. I smoke too much, so I drink more milk. I work in my garden, and pick up my grandchildren's toys."

"I can live on the pension I get" — he smile puckishly — "But not as well as Richard Burton and Elizabeth Taylor live."

There was one point, 20 years after the Battle of the Bulge, that Von Manteuffel wanted to make:

"Our trust in the Americans today is there on every level in Germany — on the farms, in the villages, in the big cities. We are confident, for example, that if the Russians attacked Berlin, Americans would help Germany."

"We can't believe in a third power group such that envisioned by Gen. De Gaulle."

Rocky Says Goldwater Should Blame Self Only

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller says Sen. Barry M. Goldwater should blame himself and not fellow Republicans for the party's losses in the November election.

The governor charged that Goldwater, as the presidential candidate, "undermined Republican unity and threatened public confidence in the very future of the party."

Goldwater had accused Rockefeller of contributing to the GOP defeat.

Rockefeller replied Monday night:

"His (Goldwater's) positions on key issues of the day did not reflect traditional Republican thinking nor a point of view acceptable to a great majority of the American people. It is this, and this alone which, in my opinion, resulted in his defeat."

Goldwater, in a copyright interview in U.S. News & World Report, said he believed he lost the presidency the day he won the Republican nomination — July 15.

He laid particular blame on Rockefeller and Gov. George Romney of Michigan as among challengers for the nomination who had painted a "caricature" of Goldwater.

That "caricature," Goldwater said, depicted him as trigger-happy and as a foe of the Social Security System and led to the landslide election victory for President Johnson.

Goldwater also said, however, that only President Dwight D. Eisenhower — who was not eligible for a third term — could have beaten Johnson.

In Michigan, Romney said he never was able to discuss issues in depth with Goldwater before July 15. Throughout the campaign, Romney maintained that he differed with Goldwater on issues, not on personality.

A third governor, Mark O. Hatfield of Oregon, figured in the dispute because Goldwater had named him as a contender for the GOP presidential nomination in 1968, along with former Vice President Richard M. Nixon, Romney, and Gov. William W. Scranton of Pennsylvania.

Hatfield said in Salem, Ore., Monday night, "to be included in such distinguished company is an honor in itself. But the requirements of state government in Oregon are the order of the day in this office."

Annual School Yule Program Slated Today

J. L. Chilcote, principal of S. Court St. School, announced today the annual school Christmas production will be presented in the school auditorium at 7:30 p. m. today.

This year's offering is a song and story production entitled "Born in a Manager."

To insure a complete school representation, children throughout the school were given an opportunity to participate. Musical and speaking talent is being used from the elementary grades and the seventh grade.

A choral group of elementary students, under the supervision of Mrs. Merle Collins, Mrs. Ula Jean Metzler, and Paul Dunkle, will join the seventh grade choral group under the direction of Clifford Kerns. These musical groups will reinforce the narrative presentations to be given by Sharon Grunden, Linda Hatfield, Brent Liston, Bill Seum, Jody Ferguson, Judy Brock, Jim Butts, John Myers Gary Dumm, Vicki Blair, Hazel Legg, Bruce Liston, Mary Beth Hughes, Sandra Kay Greene, Craig Dresbach, and Greg White.

Chilcote extended an invitation to parents and friends for this program. He noted that for many weeks, both the students and the committee, comprised of Mrs. Merle Collins, Mrs. Ruth Eblin, Mrs. Neale Phillips, Mrs. Ula Jean Metzler and Ralph Macioci, have worked diligently toward a unified program that will hopefully result in an inspirational evening relevant to the coming holiday.

DEAR ABBY: I am 11 years old and I am still confused about Santa Claus. Mom, Dad and my older sisters say there is a Santa Claus, and the kids at school say there isn't any. He doesn't let me get a word in edgewise. How can a great big fat guy get his stomach through a chimney? And how can he

'Music Hall of Fame' Is Boomed by Ohioan

WARREN, Ohio (AP)—Spurred by his pride in American music, Art Hostetler is conducting a campaign from his basement-office to establish a "Music Hall of Fame."

His motto is a sign in the basement of his home: "Non Omnis Moriar"—I shall not wholly die, like the Baseball Hall of Fame," would honor the nation's most gifted composers and musicians like the Baseball Hall of Fame," said the 41-year-old father of eight. He started the drive in 1962.

"The hall of fame is still in my basement," said Hostetler, a piano player. "But it's not fancy enough to show to the public."

Hostetler feels many people remember a great tune, but forget the composer. His drive started after correspondence with Andy Razaf of Los Angeles, composer of "Ain't Misbehavin'" "Stompin' at the Savoy", "12th Street Rag", and others.

To emphasize his point, Hostetler said of Razaf:

"Here is a man who has written so many great tunes, and yet few people know who he is. They know the song and the band who played it, but they usually have no idea who wrote the song that has become a standard in American music annals."

Hostetler has already nominated 12 Americans to his basement shrine. Beside Razaf, they include Vincent Youmans ("Tea for Two"), Leonard Bernstein, John Phillip Sousa, George M. Cohan, Irving Berlin, Richard Rodgers, Cole Porter, Victor Herbert, Jerome Kern, George Gershwin and Stephen Foster.

"All of these men are composers, but the honor is open also to conductors, singers and musicians," Hostetler said.

"These 12 men have written enough good songs that if there were no other composers in America we would still be rich in American music heritage."

Reds Swap
Purkey for Roger Craig

CINCINNATI (AP) — Roger Craig, the losingest pitcher in the National League in 1962-63, and power-hitting Charley James have been acquired by the Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds traded knuckleball artist Bob Purkey and an unidentified minor league player to the world champion St. Louis Cardinals for Craig and James.

Reds owner William O. DeWitt announced the trade Monday and said the minor league player will be named later.

Purkey, 35, has been with the Reds since 1958, and recorded his best season in 1962, winning 23 and losing five. That year Purkey beat every club in the league at least once and compiled an earned run average of 2.81.

"We're hopeful that Craig will be our right-hand relief man and that James will give us an extra right-hand hitter in the outfield," said DeWitt.

Craig won his "losing" title with the New York Mets, winning only 10 games and losing 24 in 1962. In 1963 he won five and lost 22.

The Mets traded Craig to St. Louis and he was 7-9 for the Cardinals last season with an ERA of .25. Craig started his career in 1955 with the old Brooklyn Dodgers and has a World Series record of 1-2 for the Dodgers.

James batted .223 for the Cardinals last season. He hit five home runs.

Purkey compiled a 11-9 record last season, with most of his victories coming in the final two months. His ERA was 3.03.

Star Squad

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — All-America tackle Larry Kramer of Nebraska heads a 27-man North squad announced today for the 16th annual Senior Bowl football game Jan. 9.

The squad—as did the South team announced Sunday—includes for the first time two Negro players. They are 6-4, 240-pound Michigan State tackle Jerry Rush and Utah end Roy Jefferson, a 6-2, 190-pounder.

The South's Negro players are Olympic sprinter Bob Hayes and Bob Fells, Florida A. & M. backs.

Big Ten quarterbacks Rich Badar of Indiana and Tom Myers of Northwestern will direct the North offense.

All but one of the 27 North players were picked in the drafts by National and American Football League teams and three of the squadmen were first-round choices.

They were Rush, picked in the AFL first round by Boston and in the second round by the NFL's Detroit; Indiana fullback Tom Nowatzke, No. 1 by Detroit; and back George Donnelly of Illinois, an opening-round choice of San Francisco of the NFL.

The players turn professional in the game. Members of the winning team receive $900 each and each of the losers gets $700.

Giardello Barely
Retains Crown

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — It was like the old matador against the young, dangerous bull.

Middleweight champion Joey Giardello came perilously close to being gored but he called on every trick he learned in 16 years of pro battling to beat strong Rubin (Hurricane) Carter in his first title defense Monday night.

A rousing finish in the last five rounds of the 15-rounder earned the crafty, 34-year-old champion the unanimous decision over the muscular, 27-year-old second-ranking contender from Paterson, N.J., at Convention Hall.

Giardello was cut over the left eye and shaken by a jolting left hook in the fourth round. Carter had his big chance in that round but he blew it. Giardello absorbed several other solid left hooks to the jaw from his ever-threatening foe but Pal Joey always managed to slip away from the brink of disaster. There were no knockdowns.

"If I only could have made him fall," said Carter. "Just once, if I could have made him fall. That was the difference. I won it clear — at least 9 to 6 — but a fall would have clinched it."

"I had him on the hook but let him get off. He's cagey and takes a helluva punch. Look at the great fighters he's fought and none have put him down for the count."

"He fought my fight and didn't press as I expected him to press," said Giardello. "He didn't fight inside and made it easy for me. That had a lot to do with it."

This was Giardello's first title defense since he won the crown from Nigeria's Dick Tiger on an upset decision at Atlantic City, N.J., Dec. 7, 1963.

He had only two non-title outings with Rocky Rivero. Now with eight straight victories to his credit, he plans to cash in with a couple of more non-title fights. Then he said he would like to meet the winner of a bout between No. 1 contender Joey Archer of New York and Tiger.

Archer beat both Tiger and Carter on controversial decisions in New York.

Carter, a pro three years, had scored 13 knockouts in 24 pro fights. A fast puncher with a flashy left hook, he counted on the hook to undo the champion. He came close in the fourth only.

The ring-scarred champion kept on the move constantly against his stalking, straight-moving opponent. With blood trickling from the cut most of the way, Giardello fought the classic fight — sticking with his left jab to the head, hooking to the body and head and making Carter miss.

Joey had the challenger slicing the air with dozens of punches in most rounds with a slip of his head or a slight move backwards or to the side. Carter landed his share of punches but Giardello scored with more.

The officials had Giardello the winner by the following point scores, based on the five points a round: referee Bob Polis, 72-66; judge James Mina, 71-66; and judge Dave Beloff, 70-67.

The Associated Press scorecard had Giardello a narrow winner, 69-68.

In rounds the scores were Polis 9-3-3, Beloff 8-5-2, and Mina 9-4-2. The AP had it 7-5-3.

A ringside poll showed a 15-5 majority for Giardello.

Carter entered the ring a 6-5 favorite after being a 7-5 underdog at the weigh-in. Giardello weighed 160 pounds — the exact middleweight limit — to Carter's 158½.

Giardello's record is 97-22-7, Carter's 20-5.

Van Camp
Brood Herd
Is Sold

The Van Camp racing stables, one of the largest in Pickaway County, was disbursed recently when 35 head of standardbred horses were sold at Tattersall's Sale in Lexington, Ky.

Although the brood herd was sold, George Van Camp still retained Bullet Van, the brilliant 3-year-old pacer that won $28,000. The horse posted a mark of 1:59 1-5 last year.

He also kept Virgie's Phone, Miss Caleb Van, a weanling by Caleb and out of Virgilina Van, and Dancer Van, a weanling by Dancer Hanover and Chee-ah Goose. The latter is a half-brother to Bullet Van.

Heading the list of brood mares sold by Van Camp was Chee-ah Goose, purchased by Hall Farms. They paid $21,000 for the mare, bred to Dancer Hanover.

I'M IT was purchased for $12,700 by Francis McKenzie of Amhurst Farm, Lexington, Ky. Dancing Chee-ah was obtained for $5,700 by Lana Labell, Hanover, Pa.

Also sold were Virgies Worthing, that owned a lifetime record of 2:05 1-5. Chita Can, a pacer with a mark of 2:01, T. D. S. Adios, a pacer with a record of 2:09 and Virgilina Van, whose track record was 2:01.

Approximately 450 head of horses were sold at the famous sale which saw Sprite Rodney bring a record high of $92,000. This horse was bought by Hanover Shoe Farms.

Farmer, Sportsmen Assn.
To Host School Officials

City and county school officials will be special guests Thursday of the Pickaway Farmer and Sportsmen Assn. at an annual game supper slated in the 4-H and Grange Building at the Fairgrounds. The event starts at 6:30.

The guest speaker will be Ted Lee, a retired railroad worker. He is in charge of an outdoor education program for schools and youth groups.

A dedicated outdoorsman, Lee receives only expense money for presenting his program which includes movies and slides.

Funds derived from the club sales of hunting license fees are earmarked to pay Lee's expenses, it was pointed out by Bob Wolf who was instrumental in securing him for the meeting. His program comes at no expense to the schools.

WOLF noted there is little or no outdoor conservation education available in many schools. Purpose of the club is to acquaint school officials with the program conducted by Lee.

Wolf, Bob Rader, Martin Garner and Walter Richards are in charge of the supper preparation. The menu will include rabbit and other wild game, mashed potatoes and gravy and oyster dressing.

Navy Studies
Grid Pilot's
5-Year Pact

ANNAPOLIS, Md. (AP) — The Naval Academy still is deliberating legal and other questions in the five-year contract of Wayne Hardin, who reportedly is through as head football coach at Navy.

Officials announced after a two-hour meeting Monday that further sessions would be necessary. "We fully expect to have a statement on Thursday," Capt. William S. Busik, director of athletics, said.

He said any speculation about Hardin's status until that time would be premature, that the "whole spectrum" of his contract was under review.

Busik confirmed that the board of athletic control, of which he is a member, had been in touch with Hardin's lawyer, B. Nathaniel Richter of Philadelphia. The coach did not attend the meeting, but Busik said he was advised of proceedings and seemed satisfied with them.

The delay only served to heighten speculation that the principal question was whether to buy up all or part of the four years remaining in the contract. Hardin reportedly makes about $18,000 a year.

Hardin's new contract took effect last January after a 9-1 season in which Navy ranked No. 2 nationally and received a Cotton Bowl bid. His team this year finished 3-6-1, including his first loss to Army in six years.

The Milwaukee Braves beat the Chicago Cubs 10 times in 18 National League meetings this year.

In rounds the scores were Polis 9-3-3, Beloff 8-5-2, and Mina 9-4-2. The AP had it 7-5-3.

A ringside poll showed a 15-5 majority for Giardello.

Carter entered the ring a 6-5 favorite after being a 7-5 underdog at the weigh-in. Giardello weighed 160 pounds — the exact middleweight limit — to Carter's 158½.

Giardello's record is 97-22-7, Carter's 20-5.

Senators Outfielder
Acquired by Indians

CLEVELAND (AP) — Chuck Hinton, expected to give the Cleveland Indians more speed in the outfield, was signed Monday by the American League club. His salary was not disclosed.

Hinton was acquired by the Indians this month in a trade with the Washington Senators for infielders Woodie Held and Bob Chance. Hinton, 28, batted .274 for the Senators last year and drove in 53 runs.

Koufax Wins ERA Title for Third Year

CINCINNATI (AP) — Sandy Koufax of the Los Angeles Dodgers posted the lowest National League average in 31 years in winning the circuit's earned-run championship for the third consecutive season in 1964.

Koufax compiled a 1.74 mark, the official NL pitching records disclosed today. He yielded only 43 earned runs in 223 innings. Koufax also pitched the most shutouts, seven, and had the highest winning percentage, .792 on a record of 19 victories and only five defeats.

Venturi Urges Match
Of 4 Top U.S. Golfers

NEW YORK (AP) — Who are really the "Big Two" of American golf?

Is it Jack Nicklaus and Arnold Palmer, the leading money winners and recent victors in the international Canada Cup competition in Hawaii?

Or is it any combination of Ken Venturi, Tony Lema and Bobby Nichols, winners of the three big medal play championships?

Venturi, the reigning U.S. Open champion, would like an answer. If necessary he would like it in a head-to-head, winner-take-all match on five of the best golf courses in the country.

"I always have thought — long before this year — that winning the U.S. Open was the major achievement in golf and that the man who grabs it should represent his country in an event like the Canada Cup," the Professional Golfers Association's Colfer of the Year said today.

"Frankly, I was offended because I wasn't chosen on the team this year. Bobby Nichols should have been equally upset."

"Between us, we won four of the six major tournaments in the matter of prestige. I won the Open and the American Classic, Bobby won the PGA and the Carlings World. Lema won the British Open and Palmer the Masters."

"Nicklaus and Palmer were picked to represent the United States in the Canada Cup. Rightfully, the two positions should have gone to the Open and PGA champions."

"I thought this five years ago, I'll think it next year when I may not win anything."

Venturi said in order to accent his point he would like to team with Lema in a challenge match against Nicklaus and Palmer, the best three-off-five best-ball matches on five outstanding courses.

"Let us put up $10,000 each and they put up the same, let television sweeten the pot for perhaps a $100,000 purse and see what happens," Venturi said. "I'm sure Lema would be all for it."

Canton QB Is Named
United League's MVP

CLEVELAND (AP) — Caeches of the four-year-old United Football League for the second time have picked Canton Bulldog quarterback Bob Brodhead as the league's most valuable player.

The former Duke University star led the Bulldogs to the UFL championship this year, completing 168 of 344 passes for 2,389 yards and 20 touchdowns.

In Memoriam

In loving memory of our dear
Mother, Hattie A. Groce, who passed away Dec. 14th, 1962.
We can't hear her tender voice
Nor see her dear sweet face
But we can recall sweet memories
And these we do embrace.
Her love for God, for each of us
This made her life worth while
Through all her pain and suffering
She still could wear a smile.
We miss you more as days go by
Our hearts are sore with pain
But we know that you are happy
With your loved ones over there.
Sadly missed by daughters, Phoe-be Brown and Hazel Schenauer

AND STILL MORE TO COME—The list of major Bowl games still to be played is a hefty one and this listing doesn't include the pros, who have playoff games coming up and All-Star events which keep football in the news until January 16.

The Business World

NEW YORK (AP) —Along Main Street and in the shopping centers the customers apparently couldn't care less what Wall Street may be worrying about.

In the stores the shoppers are interested only in the way things are today. And today they're better for most people than they ever have been before.

Merchants couldn't be happier about this contented state of their customers' minds. Retail sales are booming in most sections of the nation. Most of the larger stores seem assured of the biggest December ever, and that will mean the biggest year of sales ever, because the 11-month total was already ahead of last year.

Not only are sales higher, but store traffic also is setting records, as you may have noticed when you ventured forth. More people seem to be buying more things.

Many merchants report a decrease in the number of jobs and to the higher wage scales that many workers are enjoying this year.

Most potent perhaps is the general prosperity and the feeling of confidence in continuing good times that most consumer intention surveys reveal. There is also the general attitude of let's wait for the uncertainties that fret Wall Street to take visible form.

Stock traders worry about what might happen a few months hence — slowing of the long-time climb in business activity, inflation, monetary problems besetting the international financial markets, labor demands that could squeeze corporate profits.

Shoppers—and many of them also own stocks — figure all of this is yet to be faced, if ever.

Views on Television — Radio

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

AP Television-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — "If you could speak to all the people in the world, what would you say to them?" asked Isaac Stern.

Pablo Casals, described as the greatest cellist who ever lived, did not hesitate.

"I would ask them: Do you like war? I am sure all of those millions would say no. Then I would play a Bach piece for them."

This exchange was one of the many precious moments Monday night in a warm and moving CBS news special about the self-exiled Spanish musician who will soon be 88 years old.

The television audience heard that "Bach piece," and much more. There was Casals philosophizing, as he taught young musicians, making them repeat a few notes again and again until they achieved the exact inflection he sought.

Perhaps most rewarding was the leisurely talk with Casals in his Puerto Rico home with Stern, the great violinist, asking an occasional question.

"We are the leaves of a tree," Casals repeated several times, "and the tree is humanity."

It was this conviction that all humanity is related and must be free, that caused him to exile himself from his beloved Spain when Franco assumed power, to abandon his music for some years to work among refugees from dictatorships.

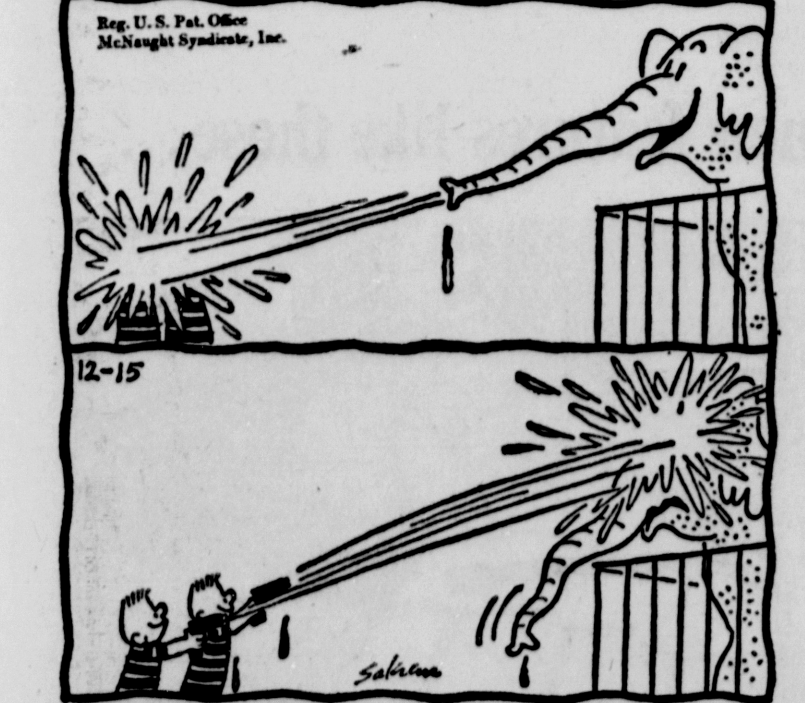

It was a fine hour which told much about the mind and heart of an unassuming little man with great gifts.

Somebody must get to work and figure out some way to harness the comedy talents of Jonathan Winters. He is probably one of our funniest, most inventive young men, and except for a rare flash here and there, it just doesn't show on television.

In his NBC hour Monday night there were a few moments. He was funny when he was a Christmas tree urging a be- kind-to-trees campaign. He was great when he used a simple folding ruler in several bits — as a flute, a walkie-talkie, fishing rod, bridge hand, beard, concertina, even a duck. There were other moments — long, long periods, when he was not funny at all.

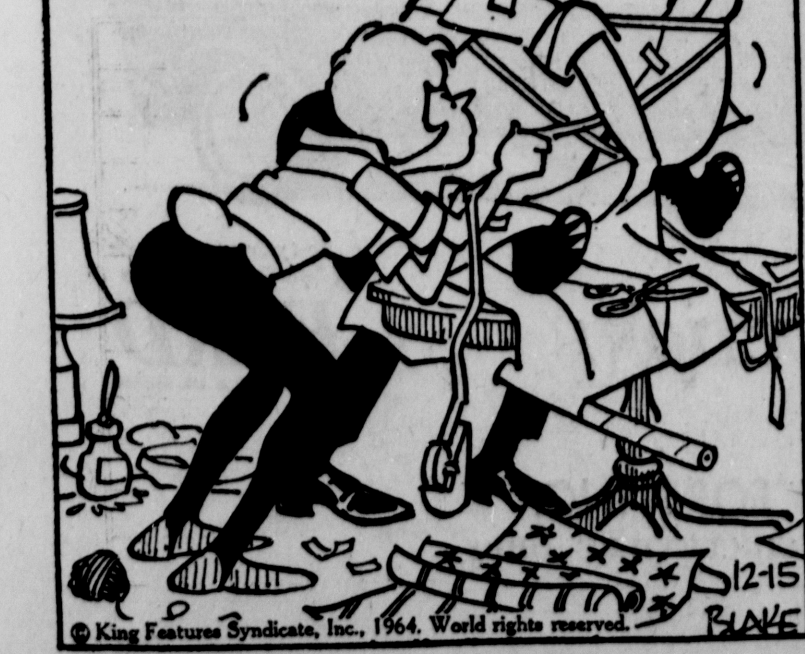

Recommended tonight: "NATO in Danger," CBS, 8:30 EST — News Special: "The Battle of the Bulge," NBC, 10-11, recalling the World War II conflict almost 20 years later.

Michigan '5' Trips No. 1 Wichita Quint

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Whoops! That crazy-bouncing basketball has given Wichita an up-and-down feeling faster than you can say Cazzie Russell.

Russell and the rebounding Michigan Wolverines floored No. 1-ranked Wichita 87-85 Monday night, less than 24 hours after the Wheatshockers had evicted the Big Ten club from the top spot among major college powers.

Wichita's first loss and North Carolina's 84-78 decision over ninth-ranked Vanderbilt promised another shake-up in the national ratings. The Top-Ten list underwent wholesale changes last week, as reflected in The Associated Press poll released today and based on results through last Saturday.

Wichita, with four straight victories at that point, drew 23 of 33 first-place ballots and out-pointed once-beaten Michigan 309-279. The Wolverines, surprised by Nebraska 74-73 Saturday night, received five first-place ballots.

The wolves may ask for a recount after Russell's brilliant second-half performance — which included the last-second winning basket — against Wichita. Oazziedazzled the Shockers after intermission, scoring 23 of his game-high 28 points — six in the final 1 1/2 minutes.

The score was knotted at 85 — 16th tie in the seesaw struggle at Detroit — with four seconds to play when Wichita lost the ball on a bad pass. Russell's running one-hander dropped through the cords at the buzzer, giving the Wolverines their fifth victory.

Bob Lewis hit for 31 points, one more than teammate Billy Cunningham, at Greensboro, N.C., as North Carolina handed Vanderbilt its second straight setback. The Commodores lost to Virginia Tech 69-64 Saturday and tumbled from third to ninth in The AP poll. Vanderbilt is 3-2 on the season. The Tarheels have won five of seven.

Not one of last week's Top Ten teams held its position in this week's poll. St. Louis, upended by Missouri 72-56 Saturday night, slipped from fourth to 10th. San Francisco and Minnesota climbed into the Nos. 3 and 4 berths, respectively, and split four first-place votes.

UCLA; Duke; St. John's, N.Y., and Kentucky all advanced after successful week-ends. The Bruins, No. 5, trimmed Oklahoma State 68-52. The Blue Devils, No. 6, routed South Carolina 111-72; the Redmen, No. 7, nipped Miami, Fla., 79-77, and the Wildcats smashed Syracuse 110-77 to gain the No. 8 spot.

Four teams which received votes in the weekly poll but failed to crack the Top Ten scored impressive home-court victories Monday night. Jon McGlockin's 24 points carried Indiana past DePaul 91-78; Wayne Estes pumped 40 points as Utah State riddled Nevada 101-80; Miami of Ohio whipped Marshall 114-90, setting a school scoring record, and Drake shattered Idaho State 56-41.

Miami's Redskins remained unbeaten with a 114-90 victory over winless Marshall, set a school scoring record and moved out in front in the Mid-American Conference basketball race.

The Redskins had tied the 108-point high mark earlier this season.

Jeff Gehring paced Miami with 29 and Tom Langfitt was high for the losers with 25.

Miami is now 5-0 for the season and 2-0 in the conference.

In other Ohio games, Denison defeated Otterbein 51-10 in double overtime. Otterbein's Don Carlos saved the day twice for his team but fouled out and Denison took over. Carlos scored 31.

At Detroit, the Titans downed Xavier 123-110. Detroit's Lou Hyatt set a career high with 35 points. Steve Thomas, Xavier's big scoring threat, got 25.

The Reds and Phils tied for second in the National League race but Cincinnati players getting a full World Series share received $1,254.76. Each Phil getting a full share drew $1,165. The Phils had more men to consider.

Republican Solons Oppose Curbs on Rules Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Plans of some Democrats to try to curb the House Rules Committee's stranglehold on legislation ran into some formidable Republican opposition today.

The plans may be a major subject of consideration at a meeting Wednesday of Republicans now serving in the House or elected to the new Congress convening Jan. 4.

In brief, a group of Democrats with leadership blessing wants to limit to 21 days the time during which the Rules Committee may hold up bills approved by other committees. After 21 days, the speaker could recognize a qualified member to call up such bills, regardless of the Rules Committee's position.

In letters to Republican colleagues, Rep. Thomas B. Curtis of Missouri, a leading planner for Wednesday's conference, urged Republicans to oppose the 21-day rule. He called it "the phony device the liberal Democrats have developed" to give the speaker more power.

As an alternative Curtis proposed more frequent use of an existing rule known as the calendar Wednesday rule. This allows the chairman of a legislative committee to call up for a vote on Wednesday any bill approved by its committee. It permits a complete by-pass of the Rules Committee, but has been used sparingly in the past because it limits debate.

Rep. Gerald R. Ford of Michigan, chairman of the GOP conference, said at least 115 Republicans have indicated their intention to attend the meeting.

Matters expected to be discussed at the session include proposed changes in the rules of the Republican party and of the House itself, more adequate staffing for minority members of House committees, construction of a new and more popular "image" for the Republican party and perhaps changes in the House leadership structure.

Currently, there are no signs of a major threat to the minority leadership of Rep. Charles A. Halleck of Indiana, although several members, including dug in and stood off assault after assault.

Ford and Rep. Melvin R. Laird of Wisconsin, are known to be available if the GOP decides to change leaders.

A heavy fog kept the U.S. Air Force grounded. There was no air support — and transport planes couldn't get through to drop supplies.

On Dec. 22, three Germans — two officers and an enlisted man — approached the American lines under a flag of truce.

They delivered an envelope containing two sheets of paper. These were brought back to McAuliffe in his cellar command post back in the town.

He has those two sheets still, locked away in a strong box. He took them out and reread them as he reminisced.

One sheet held a neatly typed message in German. The other was a duplicate in English. They were addressed to the U.S. commander of the encircled town of Bastogne.

They told McAuliffe he was surrounded — which he already knew all too well — and said surrender was the only possibility "to save the encircled U.S.A. troops from total annihilation." Unless he surrendered in two hours, the message said, a German artillery corps and six heavy anti-aircraft artillery battalions were ready to blow up the Americans.

It was signed "The German Commander."

McAuliffe said that although he was indignant, he decided to send the Germans a formal communication and that he had his one-word reply typed on a piece of paper.

Col. Joseph H. Harper, now a retired major general here, carried back the "nuts" message to the still blindfolded Germans. Harper told the German leader what it said. The German said he knew the word, but didn't understand the context.

"It means the same as 'Go to hell,' do you understand what that means?" Harper told the German.

The Nazi party was sent back into its own lines and the battle resumed.

The fog lifted enough to allow an airdrop that day and on Dec. 24, McAuliffe said.

As he recalls it, the climactic assault came about 3 a.m. Christmas morning. A new panzer division attacked from west of the town.

The next night, Dec. 26, an American tank column broke through, and the siege was over. McAuliffe said his losses had totaled 4,000 of his 14,000 men — dead, wounded, and badly frost-bitten from long exposure.

What is his lasting impression from those days?

"The courage and determination of the American soldier," the general said.

His summation: "We fought a good battle, and the Lord held me by the hand."

and got stuck. To reach the fringe of Bastogne it took Bayerlein until 3 p.m. Dec. 19.

"By that time the Americans had moved the 101st Airborne into Bastogne, and Bayerlein told me that he could not take it without heavy fighting and big losses."

Luetwitz consulted 5th Army headquarters. The 5th Army's commander, Gen. Hasso von Manteuffel, ordered him to bypass Bastogne if one last attempt failed to take the town.

Meanwhile, the 2nd Panzer Division had made rapid advances north of Bastogne.

"Bayerlein's panzer division in the small hours of the next day advanced south of Bastogne, cutting the town from its southern road links, too."

"On the 20th, in the morning, I received orders from 5th Army headquarters to call on the American defenders to surrender."

"Bayerlein handpicked a team of four men headed by a captain as emissaries. They departed for the town equipped with a makeshift white flag. After an hour they returned, minus the white flag but carrying a white piece of cardboard 10 by 10 inches."

"The sign read: 'To the German general . . . "Nuts" . . . from the American general.'"

"Frankly, I didn't know what nuts meant. I don't eat nuts, and there weren't any nuts available anywhere around. An interpreter explained the meaning of the word to me and asked me whether I wasn't insulted. I wasn't."

"All I can say now is that I recall having had the deepest respect for the American officer, Brig. Gen. Anthony C. McAuliffe."

Luetwitz said he had met McAuliffe in Paris while the German general was a prisoner of war.

"He spoke to me for about five minutes, but I only later found out that it was the man who sent 'nuts' to me at Bastogne. He probably knew who I was."

Luetwitz' troops, after failing to conquer Bastogne, pressed the attack westward. They made the deepest penetration to the west in the Battle of the Bulge but were stopped short of the Meuse.

The Americans, after weathering the first onslaught, threw fresh divisions into the battle. The skies cleared to allow massive Allied air strikes at German supply lines and troop assemblies.

Luetwitz withdrew his troops in good order, and shortly after Christmas Day Gen. George S. Patton's 3rd U.S. Army troops broke through the German lines from the south and relieved Bastogne.

Luetwitz was captured April 16, 1945, by American troops near Iserlohn, in Germany. The Allies held him until 1948, then he settled in this town on the banks of the Danube River.

The son of a noble Silesian family, he lost all his possessions in territories now under Polish rule. But after a few lean years he set up a wholesale wine company and a small publishing company and became district agent for an insurance company.

He lives in a comfortable, two-family house with a nice garden.

Luetwitz and his wife travel abroad a lot and have visited the United States.

Centerburg Couple Found Dead in Auto

MOUNT GILEAD, Ohio (AP)—A Morrow County couple has been found dead in their parked car, victims of carbon monoxide poisoning six days ago.

Found Monday were Mr. and Mrs. James E. Sheets of Rt. 1, Centerburg. Their car was parked on a small road near County Road 13, about 10 miles from here. They had last been seen this past Wednesday.

Coroner Dr. Robert Sweeney ruled asphyxiation by carbon monoxide poisoning and said the two had been dead for several days. Sheriff's deputies said the car had a faulty muffler system.

African Missionary To Talk At Bible College, Mission

Rev. Harold Shingledecker, missionary to Burundi, Africa, will speak at the Circleville Community Mission at Lowery Lane starting 7:30 p. m. today. He also is scheduled for an address at the Circleville Bible College Chapel on E. Ohio St. at 9:10 a. m. Wednesday.

The public is invited to attend both services. Rev. Shingledecker serves with the World Gospel Mission, an interdenominational missionary organization with 233 missionaries laboring in 15 areas of the world. The Mission is headquartered in Marion, Ind.

He and his family first went to Africa in 1944. Delayed in South America because of World War II, the journey consumed five long months compared to the few hours it now takes to go or come.

Rev. Shingledecker faced many responsibilities during the early years in the field. Barely having time to learn the language, he began work in the print shop.

He and his wife helped to evangelize the area, established chapel schools and taught the Christians to tithe and fully support their own pastors. He had an important part in the training of Africans to fill positions of responsibility in their churches and schools.

In addition to helping open the Bible school some years ago, the missionary conducted short-term Bible courses in various centers.

During much of his three terms of ministry, Rev. Shingledecker served as field superintendent. As adviser to the national church, he helped prepare a church constitution and discipline. For a time he directed the literature program.

He is a graduate of Asbury College and Asbury Theological Seminary, Wilmore Ky.

The Shingledeckers plan to return to Africa in the near future.

Archaeological discoveries indicate that the Norsemen brought women who attended to household tasks while their husbands sought — unsuccessfully — to carve out a permanent settlement in "Vinland" some 500 years before Columbus's voyages.
